THE question of the right of foreign residence in the interior of China appears to be greatly exercising the missionary mind at present, out to Japan but was stopped anddenly, and it is judging from letters which have appeared now added that he will not be here until next in the North-China Daily News. That missionaries possess this right, under the French treaty, is indubitable. But not satisfied with this, they wish to assert the right under the English treaty, which they claim gives a general right of residence, and not a right confined to missionaries only. The latest letter on the subject is from Hankow and is signed with the easily recognisable juitials "J. A." The correspondent, though a missionary, is apparently a militant one. Whether on an English platform he would denounce the so-called "opium war" we do not know, but he seems to be not averse to the idea of another war, which might perhaps be called the "missionary war," us he predicts that " the only end " of the matter "-referring to the difficulties with China, chiefly arising out of the missionary question-" can be that the whole weary work of re-taking Peking must be the very young fish which be affirms are deplet-" gone through do novo, as will probably be ing the fishing grounds to an enormous extent, seen before long."

the English treaty confers any right of residence in the interior. He resta his contention on the words "or other places" in Article XII. of the Treaty of Tientsin, which provides that " British sub-" jects, whether at the ports of other places, "desiring to build and open houses "warehouses, churches, hospitals, or burial "grounds shall make their agreement for cricket-Ground. no intention to open up the entire country to foreign residence. The article on which "J. A." relies simply means that at the ports or other places where foreigners are authorised to reside they shall pay corrent rates for the land they require without exaction on either side.

The allies might have exacted an unrestricted right of foreign residence, and a great deal more, had they thought fit. As "J. A." says, "The Emperor was a fugitive; "his capital was in the hands of his foreign "right of conquest-a right which the " Manchu rulers of China would be the last "to call in question, since it is the only title "they possess themselves; the allies might "have kept China, to their and to its own "-unspeakable benefit, but they chose to hand " it back on terms which no one can call hard." But it was not deemed Edvisable right-insisted-upon in the case of either JORDAN ALMONDS, NOUGAT, BUT. Japan or Korea, a circumstance which affords an index to the policy of the British Government. Another opportunity of dealing with the question in China occurred a kerosen lamp, and that from the evidence it when the Chefoo Convention was negotiated, but so far from that agreement creating any right of residence in the interior, or confirming any pre-existing right, the only reference British merchants should not be allowed to access to the port. GEORGE MEREDITH'S GROWING POPULARITY.

Some fifteen years ugo George Meredith had

Sixes then he has come ipon the public with all the prestigo of discovery. The appearance of a new work from his pen is hailed by every journal that occapies itself with literature as the great literary symptom of cholers, the actual cause, like that event of the day; his books pass into cheap editions that mark the growing demand for them. Popular, in the sense in which Dietens and Walter Scott on the one hand were popular, or on the other in which Miss Braddon and Mr. Rider Haggard are popular, he is not and never will be. For good, or for the reverse of good he has not the vulgar ear. But it is The Columbian Exposition, which has been impossible to imagine Mr. Meredith ever bending held for six months in Chicago, was officially for a moment to cutch the vulgar ear.
